From last week's planner:

Due: W, Nov. 18: Bring in an article from a recent paper or a magazine* that you feel has something to do with Nickel and Dimed. Prepare to present the following, orally, to the class, your written answers to the following questions:

- What is the subject of the article?
- What is the purpose of the article?
- Who is the audience for the article?
- What are the main points of the article?
- What companies, media or other organizations do the experts quoted in the article represent?

*You might try Time, Newsweek, The Economist, The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Honolulu Advertiser, huffingtonpost.com, truthdig.com (all of which are available online), or you might ask your parents for suggestions.

This week:

Due Tuesday, Nov. 24:

- Weekly Grammar excitement:
 - Read "Phrases" and KEEP in binder
 - Complete handout (exercise 37, page 165)
- Ehrenreich questions 9-11
- Poem of the week: NO POEM OF THE WEEK THIS WEEK
- "Amazing" flashcards
- Working presentations

Working Presentations

You must present a first-person presentation, taking on the character of a person from Working.

Requirements:

- Presentations must be between five and seven minutes – no longer!
- Presentations will be graded on information and delivery (have you practiced? Or do you have to look at your notes every second?)
- Notes are required and will be turned in after your presentation – notes may be handwritten or typed, see Murdock's example
- Four to six props are required—your prop list must be included on your notes

Ehh? Murdock will perform on Wednesday, a demonstration of sorts.

YOU MUST GO ON THE DAY PRESENTATIONS ARE SCHEDULED.
IF YOU ARE IN SCHOOL, YOU HAVE NO EXCUSE.

If you are not in school the day of your presentation, you will present on the day of your return.

Presentation order:	3. Bender	6. DuBois	9. Hayward	12. Holmes	15. Maher	18. Rogers	21. Stallings
