

“Procrastination is the thief of time:
Year after year it steals, till all are fled,
And to the mercies of a moment leaves
The vast concerns of an eternal scene.”

Edward Young quotes (English literary Critic, Poet and Dramatist, 1683-1765)

Work for the week:

- Due: M, Nov. 9 (T, 10-10, 6th pd.): Grammar Sheet 4: MJ
- Due: M, Nov. 9 (T, 10-10, 6th pd.): “A Modest Proposal” questions (920-921 in textbook)
- WORD-PROCESS – THESE ARE MINI-MINI ESSAYS
 - Questions for Discussion: 1, 3, 6
 - Questions on Rhetoric & Style: 1, 9, 11
 - Suggestions for writing: 4 (note: we will be expanding this piece of writing during the next three weeks; therefore, write, this week, something up more in the style of a journal than a standard essay. What I mean to say is that I want you to get a couple of hundred words out on paper; we’ll start with the ideas first and move on to form, style, and grammar in the next few weeks)
- Due: M, Nov. 9 (T, 10-10, 6th pd.): Audubon / Dillard (see below)
- Due: M, Nov. 9 (T, 10-10, 6th pd.): Atwood Mult. Choice mea culpae
- Due: M, Nov. 9 (T, 10-10, 6th pd.): Rate your Alfred Green essay on the AP Rubric handout

Furlough day class: Audubon / Dillard

We will have class. You may have class wherever you like, but here is what you will do (and don’t forget, one at a time to the bathroom):

Give yourself 50 minutes (no more!) and complete the 2003 AP Lang/Comp test, question 3.

Turn in

-----the Audubon/Dillard essay (and it better have some marking on it my pretties!),

-----any planning sheets you used,

-----and your essay. You MAY NOT type this thing; pretend that you are in class, writing an in-class essay.

You will want to think about writing a good (good for this type of exercise that is . . .) introduction and conclusion.
